

Timothy Gilbert
Project and Portfolio I
1601

Link to GitHub: https://github.com/FullSailTim/Gilbert_Timothy_Portfolio.git
(Still in ticket war with GitHub trying to set it private)

This week I was able to stay ahead of most of my assignments with better time management on my part. I planned out my week and put it on the same calendar as my work schedules so that I knew if I had to work a long shift, then I could double up on assignments on free time so that I wouldn't miss anymore. The Go To training this week was super helpful because during the class I was able to start organizing and planning everything out while the instructor was going over stuff we had already discussed on the phone. I have the next two days off of work so I plan on really tackling all assignments that are due this week because I know the next couple of weeks is about to get busy for me.

I believe that all my planning paid off due to the fact that I was ahead of my schedule and wasn't come home every night from work and worrying about how to finish my assignment that was due at midnight. I think that if I take the time management idea from this class and apply it to the next courses I take that it should help me stay on top of everything incase of emergency or work. This week I also spent a lot of time watching videos on Lynda on Project Management as well as time management. How to set your own schedules and pace but at the same time being able to meet certain demands that appear. In some of my spare time this week I started looking into some JavaScript frameworks for a side client project as well as some graphic design trends for Social Media marketing.