

Timothy Gilbert
Project and Portfolio: Week 4
1601

Git Hub Link: https://github.com/FullSailTim/Gilbert\_Timothy\_Portfolio.git

This final week was my most victorious one of them all. I knocked out all of the non-weighted assignments within the first day or two. I then made a goal to finish each weighted object a day before it was due, so that day of I could proof read it or change if something didn't look right. So far my grades have been passing so I think I am did a fairly good job on understanding the assignments and what was expected of me.

I did some skyping with an Alumni who is also my friend about some of the classes at Full Sail and what to expect next. By doing this it gave me a little bit of insight on how I will need to project my time management and better focus during "rush time".

I believe I took a lot away from this class. From being able to communicate clearly with the instructor in a timely matter, to further explanations and help keeping focused on a topic. I also realized that I should be utilizing the SWOT mind set, you can get over the obstacles and move forward.